

Legal notes on using online media

Dear customers,

All e-books, database and electronic full texts supplied by the university library of Aalen are available for your studies or your professional or scientific activity free of charge.

By using our services you undertake to treat the contents responsibly, including but not limited to observing the respective regulations of utilisation and copyright.

Search results may be used only for personal scientific use.

E-books can be saved, printed or copied within the scope of research and teaching. German copyright tolerates saving individual chapters.

Downloading hit lists from databases and excerpts of e-books is limited to the individual search results. Systematically downloading big data volumes or the whole database or copying for commercial purposes is not permitted.

IDs and passwords for database access must be kept secret. Disclosure to third parties is not allowed. Please provide adequate protection of your login information. As the beneficial owner you are responsible for all activities which take place through your account, and you are liable for the damage suffered by any misuse.

If misuse of the contents and access data should become known to the library, this user will be excluded from use.

We further point out that research for private or commercial purposes is not allowed (on behalf of companies and other institutions during visits or internships or otherwise).
